

Coal from Peat Bogs?

The main theory for coal formation is that peat accumulated in bogs over millions of years and formed coal under high temperatures and pressures. However, coal formation does not necessarily require slow accumulation, and can progress rapidly under appropriate conditions.

Artistic portrayal of a Carboniferous forest

Image: Morphart Creation, via Shutterstock