Drainage Basins

Modern currents flow into drainage basins from many different directions. Fossil current flow was often unidirectional across large areas of a continent, indicating that most or all of the continent was submerged, and subjected to large unidirectional flows.

Spiti Valley, India

Image: Timothy Gonzalves, CC by SA 4.0