

Stacked Layers Suggest No Long Time Gaps

These Grand Canyon sediments are exposed in distinct layers, or beds, showing they were deposited more rapidly than organisms could mix them. Bedded layers such as these were probably deposited rapidly, because slow accumulation over deep time would be expected to produce more mixing and amalgamation of layers.

Layers in the Grand Canyon, Arizona, USA

Image: Tim Standish, GRI