

Stasis Is Not Evolution

The genus Nautilus, with more than 40 species, is found from Permian sediments upward to the living chambered nautilus. Minor difference among the species of a genus do not account for the large morphological disparity among different animal classes.

The chambered nautilus is highly similar to numerous fossil species

Image: Kai Squires, CC BY 4.0